

Abstract

A method and apparatus for treatment of an outer surface of a food product are provided using a fluid having properties selected for treating the surface and bringing 5 the fluid into contact with an outer surface of the food product in a generally continuous manner in a commercial food processing environment.